Vice Consul Krieg and Miss Philinda Jones Wed in Lagos, Nigeria

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made of the marriage of Miss Philinda Jones of Miami, Fla., and Orange, N. J., to Vice Consul William L. Krieg, son of Lawrence Krieg, 197 Hudson avenue. The marriage took place in Lagos, Nigeria, West Africa, where the bridegroom is stationed.

The ceremony was solemnized on Saturday, Feb. 6, by Rev. Adair, an American missionary, in the First Baptist church in Lagos. Attending the bridegroom as best man was John McSweeney, vice consul at Acora, Gold Coast. Friends of the couple had made the church gay with many fragrant, tropical flowers.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the garden of the consul general's home.

The romance of Miss Jones and Mr. Krieg began in Lisbon, Portugal, while the bride was in the foreign service. To join her fiance for the wedding she made a 45-day sea voyage from a north Atlantic east coast port.

She arrived in West Africa on Feb. 4 and plans were made for the ceremony including the making of a wedding ring by the native goldsmiths. Finding the food restrictions in Lagos would not include a wedding cake the Norse captain of the ship on which Miss Jones arrived, assisted by the ship's cook, stepped in and arranged for the cake. Then it was found that a lack of an import permit might not permit it to be delivered for the ceremony. Finally the cake arrived for the important part it was to play at the reception. The couple is now at home in 4 Broad street, Lagos.

Vice Consul Krieg is a graduate of Dartmouth and of the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy in Boston. He has been in foreign service for three years.
